Bereavement Support

Local and National information and support during Covid-19

Bereavement, grief and loss can cause many different symptoms and they affect people in different ways. It is a difficult experience under any situation and is taking place under very challenging circumstances during the coronavirus pandemic. Those who experience loss during the coronavirus outbreak may experience increased trauma and may be cut off from some of their usual support network.

A bereavement from COVID-19 is likely to be a very challenging kind of bereavement for most people. Because of this, it is really important that people bereaved by any cause at this time are cared for and receive support, especially in the first days and weeks following their bereavement. We know, that early self-care, care from people immediately around us, and care from others too, can mean that it is easier, over time, to make a recovery, with good mental health.

A death during the coronavirus pandemic potentially means:

- little time to prepare for a loved one's death, following a period of illness that they suffered.
- no time spent with a loved one before they died, due to infection risk.
- inability to say goodbye after death during this time of pandemic, when normal gatherings are not possible safely.
- people are grieving while often separated from loved ones who are also grieving but in other locations, as people are not moving around.
- many practical challenges, for example if the person bereaved was previously receiving care from someone who died, or they have responsibilities to care for others or to continue working.
- coping with a shocking bereavement at a time when the bereaved person, or others in their circle of family and friends, may also be ill.

The NHS website has information on bereavement www.nhs.uk/conditions/stress-anxiety-depression/coping-with-bereavement/ and information on supporting mental health and wellbeing during the pandemic www.nhs.uk/oneyou/every-mind-matters.

Support is still available from GP's, NHS 111, NHS hospitals and mental health services. Telephone and online confidential listening support services such as Silverline (0800 470 80 90:for older people), Samaritans (116 123) and Childline (0800 1111) are also available.

Our Frontline is a resource to support frontline health, care, emergency and key workers which offers round the clock one to one confidential mental health and bereavement support, by call or text. Text FRONTLINE to 85258 or call 116 123 for a conversation with a trained volunteer. Visit www.mentalhealthatwork.org.uk/ourfrontline/ for online resources.

On the next page we have listed a number of local and national bereavement charities and organisations that offer guidance, advice, and support to deal with bereavement during this pandemic, both the practical and psychological aspects. Please note many faith groups and occupational groups will have their own resources and sources of support.

The details in this resource are correct at the time of printing, but services and information are changing on a frequent basis in response to the current pandemic. If you are aware of any changes or to receive the most up to date copy of this resource please email emma.bates@milton-keynes.gov.uk
